

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

THURSDAY EVENING, JULY 13, 1882.

THE DEMOCRATIC State central committee has acted wisely in deciding against a State convention and against making a nomina- master and pilot in the U.S. navy during tion for Congressman at large. It is now | the civil war. entirely too late to call a convention, for as the delegates are elected on court days it | feet that up to this time no American has would be September before one could be suffered in his person at Alexandria nor in called, and between then and election day his property save only in such manner as in the neighborhood of the Hatchie river in there would not be time enough to reorgan- that to which every resident of a bombarded ize and discipline the party. By refusing to nominate a candidate for Congressman at large they make concession to the democratic readjusters, but they afford an opportunity for all opposed to the ruinous sway of Mahone to vote for Mr. Massey, and re- by the committee is the wisest that can be liable information is to the effect that for every so-called democratic vote he will lose be will gain five that have heretofore been cast with the opposition. The candidates know anything about Virginia affairs, a now are Mr. Wise, who supports General Kentuckian of national reputation saving Mahone and the Arthur wing of the repub- that the Virginia democrat who failed to lican party, and Mr. Massey, who is almost as much opposed to Arthurism as he is to Mahoneism. Between the two no man learned that while several of the members who pretends to be a democrat will hesitate a moment for whom to vote.

THE BLACK list on ex-Secretary Robeson's naval job bill is composed of the following names: Aiken, Evins and Tillman, of South Carolina; Cassidy, Nevada; Ellis, Louisiana; Shelly, Alabama; Wilson, West Virginia; Ladd, Maine, and Speer, of Georgia. They have all been more or less fishy for some time, Messrs. Aiken and Ellis having previously aired their so-called "independentism," Mr. Ladd being a greenbacker, and Mr. Speer a Mahone minus Mahone's brains and money. It is to be hoped that their constituents may substitute better men for them at next fall's election. Two of them, Tillman and Shelly, hold seats in the House that are contested.

MR. MASSEY may not be the best man the democrats could support for Congressman at large, but those who believe he is have much to sustain them in the hate for and dread of him, felt by the Mahoneites. That they dread him is proved by their opposition to his candidacy. That they hate him is proved by the manner in which General Mahone's home organ denounces him, of which the following is a fair sample.

"No fouler miscreant ever contaminated the earth by his baseness, or ever affronted AMONO THE Seven professed democrats who voted with the republicans for Mr. Robeson's plundering naval bill were three from South Carolina, Messrs. Aiken, Evins and Tillman. The Palmatto State carries things to extremes. She is as much too anxious now to be "entirely reconstructed" as she was twenty-one years ago to get out of the Union.

Why pots should call kettles black is what few people can tell, but that they do is made plain by the fact that the Mahoneites are denouncing Mr. Massey as a repudiator.

This is by no means the first time that the Egyptian Alexandria has been scourged with fire by its enemies; but, though people can become accustomed to anything, the inhabitants of that unfortunate city are deprived of all the consolation that may lie in such a condition, by the long intervals between the conflagrations.

THE REPUBLICANS aware of the turn in the tide of opinion respecting the tariff question, have even gone so far as to advise a reduction of $8 a ton in the duty on Bessemer steel.

No Convention.

The Democratic State Central Committee of Virginia, at its meeting in Richmond yesterday, after a free interchange of views amongst the members, and after hearing the advice of a number of prominent democrats from various sections of the State, decided not to call a State Convention, nor to nominate a candidate for congressman at large. The following is the resolution adopted.

"Resolved, that in the judgment of the State Conservative Democratic Committee it is inexpedient to nominate a candidate for congressman at large, either through the instrumentality of a State convention or otherwise, since the paramount object of rescuing this State from the evils of bossism and Stalwart Mahone-Republicanism may best be attained without such action."

The action of the committee will doubtless meet with the cordial indorsation of the party in all parts of the State. While all admit there is some opposition in the party to Massey, it is the general opinion that when the matter is thoroughly discussed and the situation clearly presented to the peowill make preparations at once for a vigorous canvass. It is expected that Mr. Massey will take the stump immediately and prosecute the canvass with his characteristic vigor.

England's Decision.

The London Times says: "We do not hesitate to on public opinion and the judgment of European statesmen. The representatives of three powers have already expressed satisfaction at the government's action. There is, therefore, no ground whatever for the assertion that the action of England is judged by Europe as high-handed or un-necessary. If the Porte refuses to intervene in Egypt we shall gladly welcome the assistance of France, and signs are not wanting that M. de France, and signs are not wanting that M. de Frycinot has shown timidity little to the taste of his countrymen. M. Gambetta's speech yesterday in one of the bureaux of the Chamber, in the course of which be said that 'the most serious feature was that England and France, after having acted together at Alexandria in presenting the ultimatum, had parted company, and that if the separation proved definitive never would France have been in a more serious position, is a sign of public opinion not to be neglected."

FROM WASHINGTON

Special Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.] Washington, D. C., July 13.-A delegation of the Philadelphia Bar Association was here last week to consult with Senator Johnston about the monument to be erected in August. one of the public squares of this city to Chief Justice Marshall. The association they represented has collected $20,000, and Congress has appropriated an equal amount for the indicated purpose. The result of the conference was an agreement that both sums should be consolidated and expended upon the statue and its pedestal, and that the work should be entrusted to the artist Storey, whose father was a personal friend of the distinguished Virginia jurist.

Messrs. Barbour and Tucker, who were among the prominent Virginians who attended the meeting of the democratic central committee of their State in Richmond yesterday, returned to this city to-day. They are satisfied that the course adopted pursued under existing circumstances. In this, it may be mentioned, they are sustained, not only by all the Virginians here, but by all the democrats of other States who support Massey ought to go at once over to the Mahone party. From some of the other gentlemen who were at the meeting it is were at first opposed to the course that was finally adopted, all except two, Messrs. Matthews, after they had heard what was said by the representatives of the other sections of the State voted for it as the most advisable course that could be pursued, and that the impression was that Mr. Massey would be elected by a large majority. A well known readjuster from the 9th district, when asked this morning what he thought of Massey's chances, replied that he would at least divive the readjuster vote of his district. Schator Johnston when asked the same question said the committee had done just what they should have done, that their action would tend to reunite the party, and that if such good and true democrats as those who composed the committee were satisfied with Mr. Massey's democracy it was strange, to say the least, that others should be harder to please.

Both the applicants for the postmastership at Alexandria, the incumbent, Mr. McKenzie, and Mr. Windsor, Gen. Mahone's nominee were in the city to-day. It is expected that the nomination for that as well as for the Lexington office will be sent in during the next few days.

The House agreed this morning to give all its employees one month's extra pay. This of course was the most satisfactory thing it has done this

The House also agreed to give the widow of the the late Mr. Conway, the pay due him as a mem-ber of the House. Mr. Conway was the first member of the House from Kansas. He died at the insane asylum of this city.

It has recently been discovered that ex-Mar-shal and present register of deeds, Fred Douglas, was one of the leading conspirators in the John Brown affair. The protracted session of Congress is extremely annoying and inconvenient to those members whose fences require mending. Those who are opposing their renomination are having their own way while they are detained here. -++ SPRAGUE PREPARING FOR WAR .- A dispatch from Providence says that yesterday afternoon William Sprague bought of the Providence Tool Company a case of Martini rifles, which were delivered to him at the office of the Quidneck Company, of which he is president. In the evening an employee of Sprague was endeavoring to purchase 200 pounds of amunition. This purchase derives some significance from the fact that some weeks ago the receiver appointed by the court was forcibly ejected from the Quidneck Mills by the employees of Sprague, with threats of shooting. PRICE OF MEAT .- The Baltimore Sun in an editorial on the high price of meat says: "How much ple they will see that oppositon to him means the dearness of meat is due to the short crops of support of republicanism. The democrats last year, and how much to combinations to keep up prices we do not undertake to say; but, per-haps, both causes have to do with it. Whether it is owing to one or both, the remedy is the same. It is, by generally consent, to reduce the purchases of meat to the lowest possible quantity. If those purchases were reduced one-half, or even two-thirds, as they well might be to advantage during the summer, the supply would soon be-come in excess of the demand, and prices would say that the effect of England's determination has been to produce a most favorable impression, both the well-to-do that should set the example to the other classes of their fellow-citizens, for they, by the refinement of cookery, can compensate for a lesser quantity of meat much more easily than the working classes can do."

What Might Have Been. The sorrow over the fate of DeLong and his near they were to safety. The latest account of the facts obtained by the search party indicate that but for accidents and mistakes of the most trifling character all but one of De Long's party and himself might have been alive today. The first and most grievous mistake was the leaving of their only shot-gun at the hut where they first found shelter after reaching shore, and the taking in its stead a rifle. Had they kept the shot-gun they could have subsisted on ptarmigan-a species of grouse-until assistance arrived. The rifle was an ineffectual weapon against ptarmigan, which from De Long's record appears to have been numerons and it was rarely that one was brought down. Had they even remained at the hut where they left the shot-gun they would have beed saved, for the natives visited the hut a short time afterwards and found the shot-gun there; saw also the footprints of the party "only two days old" but thinking they were the tracks of smugglers or robbers. went away, and when they learned subsequently that it was De Long's party, fearing punishment, they remained silent for some weeks until rescue was too late. If DeLong had landed thirty miles further west, or pursued a westward course thirty miles-he would have struck a village of natives who live north of Bulun all the year. It is now ascertained that within the policy which events have marked out thirteen miles of the route which the party took twenty reindeer carcasses were hanging in a hut for winter food. by a slight deflection from the line of route on starting it is now said that the party would have struck this well-provisioned hut. A more grievous chapter of accidents, all tending to the one fatal ending, cannot well be imagined. It shows upon what slight, almost trivial circumstances the life or death of individuals may depend. If Delong had not doubted the existence of the Island of Stolboy, or assumed that his boats had passed it long before, and if in that view he had not persisted that they were on the Island of Titary, about twenty-five miles from Kumak-Surka; if he had not taken the supposed route to Kumak-Surka when in point of fact he was moving toward Stolboy; if he had gone westward but thirty miles, or in another direction branching off fifteen miles from his line of route, or if he had not left his shotgun at the hut, or if he had halted but two days there, the whole party, except the one sick comrade, and perhaps even he, might have been saved. But it was fated to be different, and all hypotheses amount to nothing. It is so easy to be wise after the
